Sooner and later the package is the ideal option against the backdrop of a pandemic. Pocono Palms is a new wedding venue located in a renovated 1912 church in Cresco. Photo Elle StudiosNo, not every wedding venue in rural Pennsylvania is a barn or farm. In fact, some of them are perfectly modern. Enter Pocono Palma, a four-acre rural oasis in Cresco. The decommissioned Catholic Church circa 1912 was restored to a modern enclave complete with covered and open spaces, secret sites and an early and late package to ease the pain of planning amid the pandemic. And it's perfect for a couple who want to go wild with their Big Day whim. We're excited about the couple we bring here, says Alyssa O'Leary, who co-owns Pocono Palms with sister Carolyn O'Leary. We attract couples with a creative, open mind. Originally from Allentown, the two previously lived in New York, where they worked in design and marketing respectively, before they traded their big city gigs for their dreams: collaborating creatively. It materialized in the wedding and destination. When we started looking for a place, we didn't have this particular vision, says Alyssa, a mom-to-be and former fashion designer with a love of woodworking. We wanted something exciting; we looked at properties with a ton of land. But when we walked in, we had a moment as it would work. Floral from Kraft and Co. and Cake Love Bites by Erica Coupl: Stella and Sahib Brown Stella Fitness; Barbara Couture dress; Hair and makeup from BB DeCheine Fine Men's Salon and Beauty Co., and the Top Hat FormalwearThey has moved into the same house with her family (Carolyn is a mother of two and has previously worked on initiatives such as the launch of Justin Bieber's first fragrance) to devote her time to restoring the property formerly known as St. Bernadette. Repair work began in 2019; while the pandemic has brought construction to a halt, they are on the way and expect to open in late August or autumn. Now there are tours. Do you want to see it? Let's start indoors - and up, with arches. The duo painted them black, adding a striking contrast to the white walls. (Just imagine snapping pictures at these angles!) A black and white dance floor with tiles was added. Sixteen herringbone tables were made of benches, and the confessional was converted into a women's room. Hidden Space (and photographer favorite), according to Carolyn, is a former loft choir, with its view of the reception. The sisters are looking into making it a private living room or preparing space; It can also function as an area for whisky tasting. The indoor reception can accommodate up to 160 people (in that or other COVID-19 rules). Outside, the freshly painted blue-green facade was topped with a metal roof. Team Team half of the car park to create outdoor spaces, including a ceremony and an outdoor cocktail area; There are trails, streams and bridges for first-sight photography. What about the palms? Tropical plants give the place a fun vibe - think mid-century Palm Springs style. We are in this rustic setting, surrounded by trees, and in our little oasis, says Alyssa. This is unique to the area. Ultimately, they hoped to create a transformative space; It can be autonomous or adaptable, with all black and white with neutral and green, or form a background for any trend. Want to get married indoors during the winter, surrounded by ultra-glam decor? Are you sure. Want to set a boho-cool scene outside? It's going to be a breeze. In fact, the couple does not limit suppliers, although they have a recommended list (including in these photos); Your team must meet with the Pocono Palms team in advance. The destination offers a variety of packages and is largely booking for 2021 - although its early and late program adds an incentive for those who want to say: I'm doing the fall. With this service, you and your betrothed will be able to hold a micro-wedding (less than 40) now and a bigger bash in 2021 for $8,750. (This package requires you to work with a specific list of vendors.) It also costs a Saturday wedding package that includes full day access to the grounds, lounges and wedding suites. Other options are a clap for 10 or less and micro-weddings. If all that arouses your interest, know this: Alyssa and Carolyn dream for this space to see you use it your own way. When the green flag waves for the start of the Gander Outdoors 400 at Pocono Raceway on Sunday, it will mark the 600th NASCAR Cup Series start by Jimmie Johnson. To say Johnson has achieved a lot since making his first career start in the Hendrick Motorsports Series at Charlotte Motor Speedway in October 2001 would be a gross understatement. But back then, Johnson wasn't sure of the bet he seemed to be in the years since. I was in my own weird mental space wondering if I was ready for the Cup or not, Johnson told The Associated Press.Johnson made three Cup series starts in 2001 before being a full-time in the series the following season. Chad Knaus has been Johnson's crew commander since that first full-time season in 2002, but he wasn't the first crew commander for the soon-to-be superstar. Ken Howes called the shots for Johnson in those first three races. If someone got up at the time and stood up and said, hey, this guy's going to win seven championships, would probably send you for a drug test, Howes said, according to the same AP article. Your hope was that he had talent, he would gain experience and go on Become a good competitive driver. Win a few races each year and kind of start there. Perhaps a challenge for the championship. But with Knaus atop the pit box, Johnson did go for a win of seven cups, tying NASCAR Hall of Famers Richard Petty and Dale Earnhardt for the most all-time. These seven include five straight between 2006 and 2010, as well as a record. His first 599 races in the series also include 83 trips to victory lane, tying him with another Hall of Famer, Cale Yarborough, for sixth place on the all-time winning list. Unsurprisingly, Johnson is already considered one of the best of all time and certainly the future first NASCAR Hall of Famer ballot.Johnson, though, is not yet finished, and neither Knaus, for that matter. Last year the driver signed a three-year extension to keep him behind the wheel of No.48 until the 2020 season. Knaus recently signed for another two years, bringing his contract to the same term as Johnson. However, one of the members of the party No 48 will be missing after 2018. Lowe's, who has been a major sponsor for all of Johnson's 599 starts so far and will remain on the board until the end of 2018, has announced his retirement at the end of the season. The first 20 races of 2018 were a fight for Johnson and company. The No.48 has just had two top fives so far this season, the best showing being third at Bristol Motor Speedway in Tennessee. But so was the case with Chevrolet as the manufacturer adapts to its new Camaro. More specifically, Hendrick Motorsports has struggled strongly, at least by HMS standards, since around the middle of the 2017 season. Johnson's last victory came at Dover International Speedway in Delaware more than a year ago, in June 2017, in the 13th race of this 36th season. Team 48 is a three-time winner in Pocono, but its last win was back in 2013, five years ago. He was airlifted to Lehigh Valley Network Cedar Crest Hospital. No further information is known at this time, but this post will be updated when further official word on its condition reaches us. The race was not a red flag, it was restarted for eight laps, allowing Wilson Andretti's team Ryan Hunter-Reay to take the win. Updates as we have. UPDATE: This content is imported from Twitter.
